Violence affects your mental as well as physical state of health, which is the reason we are asking you questions about violence. Violence between adults in a family also affects the children and young people in it negatively.

Support is available if you've been subjected to violence and/or if you heard or saw violence committed against a family member while you were growing up. You can also get help if you yourself have subjected someone else to violence.

1. Have you ever been threatened, controlled, harassed, treated in a degrading manner, or subjected to some similar treatment by someone close to you (that is, a partner, family member or relative)?
